

Yes, vanadium flow batteries are considered safe for residential use. They are non-flammable and non-explosive, reducing the risk of fire or chemical hazards associated with some other battery ...

