

During the day, the photovoltaic power is directly supplied to the charging pile, and the excess power is stored in the energy storage system. At night or when the light is insufficient, the ...

