

Britain's battery storage capacity has tripled since 2020, reaching 2.4GW operational projects with another 20GW in development pipelines. But what's really driving this surge? The answer lies ...

