How does a windvane work?

Nevertheless, think the other way around, with a windvane your boat will look like a "real" go anywhere boat. Secondly, the windvane inherently can only steer a certain course relative to the wind-angle. It will change course accordingly when the wind shifts - later more on that. So, Andrea, show us how the Hydrovane is "activated".

Which windvane servo pendulum is best for a large boat?

At Scanmar, we manufacture the Monitor Windvane servo pendulum system, and the Saye's Rig, which is often the best choice for very large boats with high freeboard. Whatever your unique requirements, we have a self-steering solution for you. Scanmar is the world's largest manufacturer of mechanical windvane selfsteering devices.

What is a windvane & why is it important?

In the Golden Globe Race, of course, where only AIS is a concession to modern times, the windvane is an absolute essential part of the boat. Andrea Lodolo went for the Canadian brand Hydrovane. There are not many cons regarding this system. One is that the installation of this system kind of "ruins" the clean and neat lines of a boat.

Which windvane self-steering system should I Choose?

Windvane self-steering options fall into two categories, servo pendulum and auxiliary rudder. Servo pendulum solutions utilize your boat's own rudder and as the name suggests, auxiliary rudder products work with a separate, independent rudder system. We believe servo-pendulum systems like the Monitor are usually your best option.

How many rudder pins does a windvane need?

There are two pins which have to be removed, just like in a aeroplane. When this is done, both the windvane itself and the attached rudder down in the water are free to rotate and move. Andrea tells me that these pins are essential and that he secures them thoroughly and has a total of four spare pins for his adventure.
